~INTRODUCTION~ Historical Performance

Performance of the Suits Business

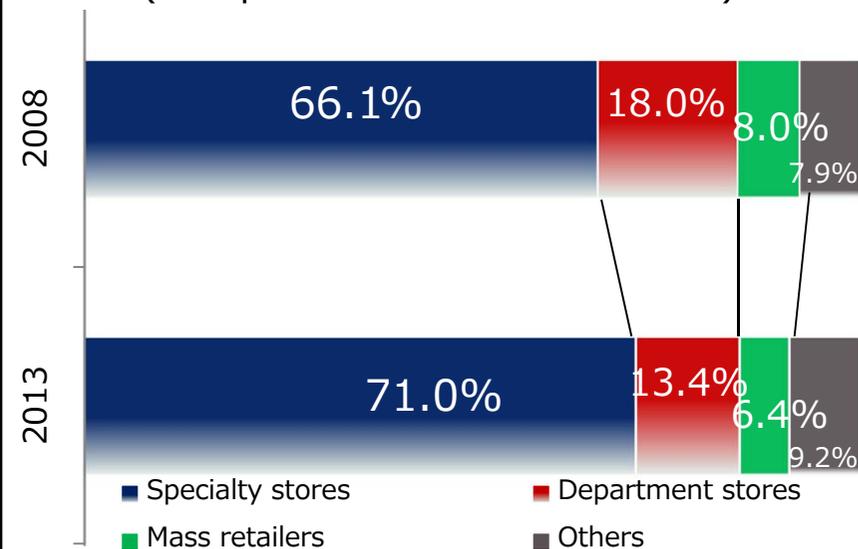

In the suits business, sales have recovered to the levels prior to the Lehman crisis in FY2008, thanks primarily to the growth in womenswear sales. Since FY2010, sales of womenswear have been growing 20% each year, and grew to account for 11.7% of total sales in FY2013. Menswear sales also, after bottoming out in FY2010, have been increasing in conjunction with the increase in store openings. Under this medium-term management plan, the Company intends to reinforce womenswear and other peripheral product items other than suits.

Suits Market by Sales Channel
(Comparison of 2013 with 2008)

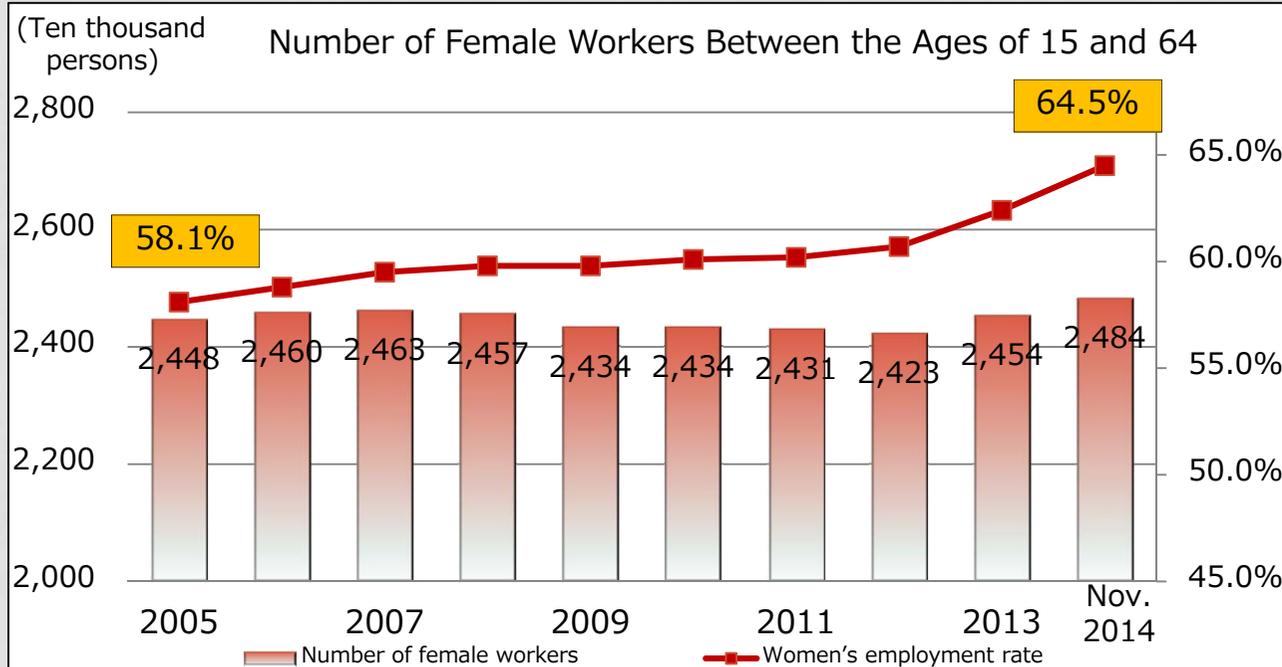

Note: On a retail value basis
Source: "White Paper on Apparel Industry," Yano Research Institute Ltd.

In the past decade, the suits market, after having peaked at ¥309,900 million in 2007, has been on a declining trend due to the mass retirement of the baby boomers and the spread of Cool Biz. Despite these circumstances, the Company has been able to increase its market share to 28.8% in 2013 by steadily opening new stores and relocating existing stores, as well as due to withdrawal of our competitors and the downsizing of businesses by mass retailers.

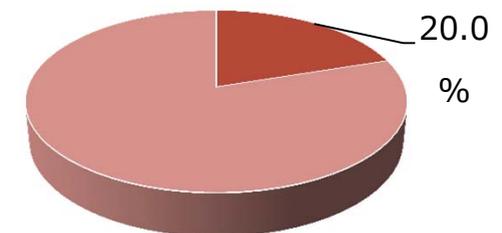

A view of the suits market by sales channel indicates that specialty stores have captured the market shares of department stores and mass retailers, increasing its share by approximately five percentage points in the past 5 years through proactive store openings in urban areas and shopping centers (SCs), improvement of product quality and reinforced sales promotion.

The Company's market share of women's formal wear

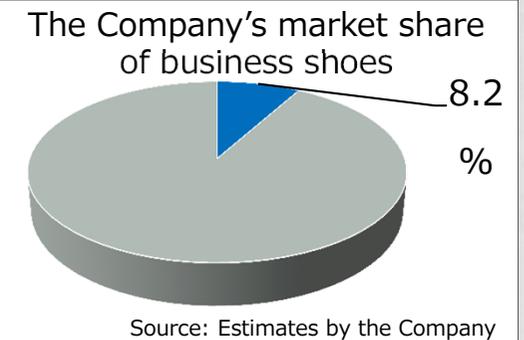

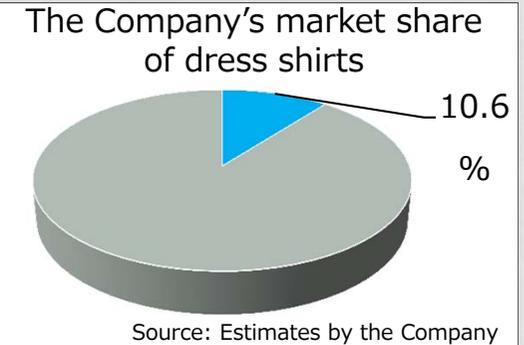

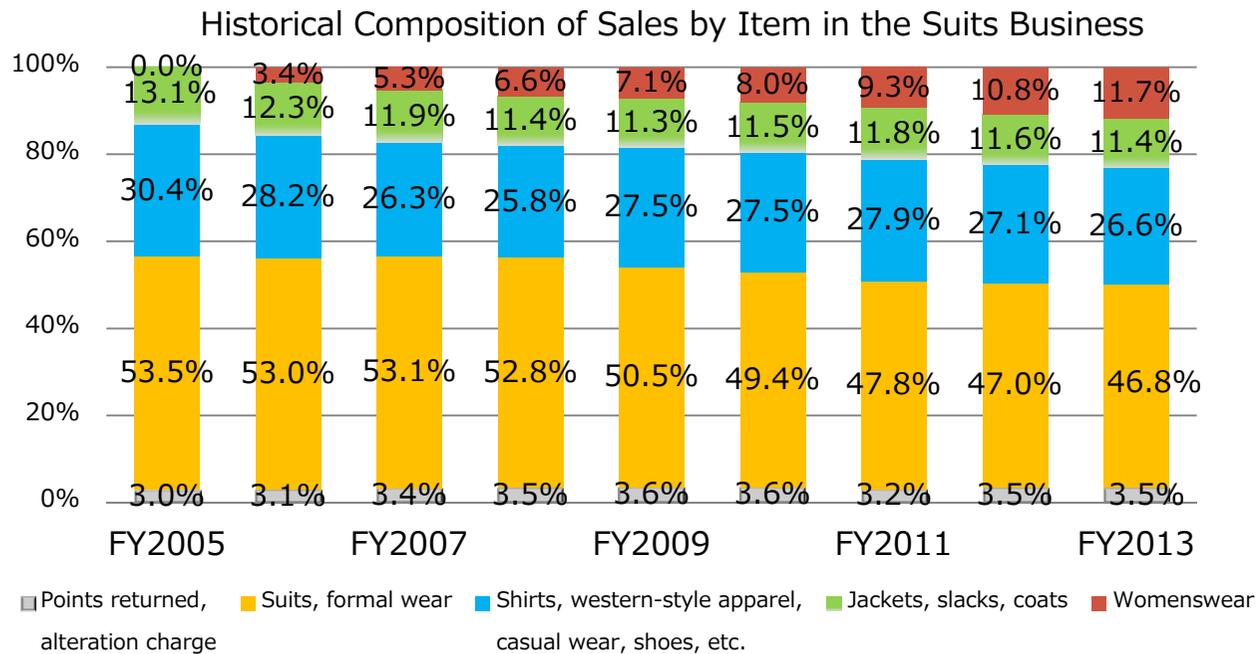

Source: Estimates by the Company

While the employment rate among women between the ages of 15 and 64 (working-age population) had remained mostly unchanged until 2012, but it reached a record high at 64.5% in November 2014. As further increases in womenswear sales are expected going forward thanks to the effects of Abenomics and other factors, the Company intends to reinforce womenswear sales as one of the key strategy items also under the medium-term management plan.

While the Company currently maintains around 20% share of the job hunting suits market, its share in the formal wear market is still around 6%. The Company will aim for a market share comparable to that of its men's formal wear.

~INTRODUCTION~ Market Environment (Other than Suits)

While the demand for suits has declined due to factors including a low birth rate and an aging population and the widespread acceptance of casual wear at the workplace, the Company intends to raise the general level of business wear sales through increasing sales and market share of peripheral product items other than suits such as dress shirts and business shoes, in addition to womenswear.

The Company's market share of peripheral product items is currently around 10%. The Company intends to expand sales going forward by launching functional products, reinforcing sales promotions and improving the sales floor area.
